

WE CALL YOUR LEADS FOR YOU

How we call, qualify and book every lead for our clients

A simple guide to how our team calls, qualifies and books your leads, from the first call to the booking in your calendar.

Part 1: What we need from you before we start

We have an in-house, sales-trained team calling and qualifying leads for our clients across Australia and New Zealand. Before they call a single lead for you, we need five things. Your marketing manager confirms each one with you on the onboarding call and is directly responsible for your results.

1. Your service area

What it means

A map of the areas you service and the areas you don't. Anyone out of area is not booked.

How we apply it

- The setter checks every lead's postcode against your map before qualifying them.
- Example: postcode 2000 is checked against your area. If it falls outside, it is closed as out of area.

Client playbook

Ask the caller's postcode before you dial, then ask what the client wants asked.

14 suburbs - last changed by Aaron Tang, 24 Sept 2026

2. Your budget floor

What it means

The smallest job worth your time. For example, a pool builder might set a typical job of $60–70k and a hard floor of “nothing under $15k”.

3. Must-ask questions

What it means

The project details you need before a consult. Examples: roof size, pool size, tight access, pre-approvals, plans.

How we apply it

- We suggest questions based on data across all our clients in your trade.
- We always ask your questions as well, and log every answer on the contact.

4. Hard disqualifiers

What it means

What you explicitly do not do. Examples: no minor repairs, no strata. These leads are never booked.

5. The jobs you want more of (and less of)

Tell us which jobs are most valuable to you and which you’d rather not take, so we can prioritise the right bookings.

Client action

Confirm all five on the onboarding call.

Tell your marketing manager straight away if anything changes, such as your service area, budget or services.

Part 2: What happens to every lead

CALL CENTRE · HOW IT WORKS

What happens to every lead

Every enquiry from your ads is called by our team. Nothing sits in your inbox waiting.

6. The lead journey

1. Someone sees your ad on Facebook and clicks it.
2. They fill in their details on your form.
3. Our team calls them within 5 minutes, Monday to Friday, 8am to 6pm. Fast calls mean more bookings.
4. We qualify them on project, timeframe, budget and location, plus the questions you asked us to ask.

5. If they meet your criteria, we book them straight into your calendar.

The image shows a Facebook advertisement for retaining walls. The ad text reads: "North Shore homeowners: that slope in your backyard could cost you $35,000 in emergency repairs. ...See more". The main headline is "Looking For A New Retaining Wall?" with a sub-headline "FREE Retaining Wall Plan". Below this, it says "7 Spots Available — Book Today". The ad features a photo of a retaining wall with a circular inset labeled "BEFORE" showing a slope. A red arrow points from the "BEFORE" inset to the main photo. At the bottom of the ad, it says "Claim your FREE Retaining Wall Plan (Valued at $597)" and "Learn more". Below the ad, there are icons for Like, Comment, and Share, and a comment count of "9 comments".

Where are you at right now?

- ☐ Just researching
- ☐ Need ideas & guidance
- ☐ Want a rough price
- ☐ Ready for a detailed quote

7. We qualify, we don't sell

What it means

Our job on the call is to filter out people who aren't serious. We don't try to sell the job. You do that at the consult.

Who gets booked

- They know what they want.
- They have a budget that meets your floor.
- They want to go ahead soon (roughly the next 3–5 months), not in two years.
- They fit your service area and aren't on your do-not-book list.

Who doesn't get booked

- People just thinking about it, or planning years out.
- People looking for something free, or a free quote with no intent.
- People who clicked the ad by accident.

Why this matters

You only spend time on people ready to go ahead.

You stop quoting people who were never going to buy.

Part 3: Follow-up, after hours and weekly reporting

8. We keep calling until we reach them

How we apply it

- First 24–48 hours: 3–6 call attempts, plus SMS.
- Then: we keep following up over the next 7–14 days.
- In total: 8–12 attempts before a lead is closed.

Most people don't answer the first or second call. A strong follow-up process means every marketing dollar is fully used.

9. Unqualified leads are closed for you

Some leads will always be unqualified. When we reach them, we close them straight away and tag the reason, so you never spend a minute on them.

10. After hours and weekends

- Leads after 6pm or on weekends get an instant SMS, and our AI assistant can reply to them.
- A setter calls first thing the next business morning at 8am.
- Example: a lead comes in Friday at 8:40pm, gets an SMS straight away, and a call Monday at 8am.

11. Friday update

Every Friday, our sales team sends you an update: who we booked, who didn't answer, and who we disqualified. You can see exactly the work being done on your leads.

James Boland 3:43 PM

Hey [REDACTED], quick update from our end.

We've booked you 3 new calls this week, all local:

- [REDACTED] (Raymond Terrace): pergola over a 3x3m deck, wants it before Christmas
- [REDACTED] (Warners Bay): pergola plus deck, about 3 x 4.5m
- [REDACTED] (Belmont North): replacing a damaged patio roof and deck, ASAP

The team is now checking location and budget before they book anyone, so you shouldn't be getting any more 2-hour drives.

We've also got a new covered patio video ad ready to go live.

How did you go with [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]? And if you get a sec, a quick outcome on [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] would really help us keep tightening who we book for you.

Part 4: Who is calling your leads

12. An Australian-based team trained on your business

- Our setters are Australian-based, sales-trained and have years of experience across trades.
- They are trained on your business: what you do, what you specialise in, what you don't do, and your budget floor.
- They are introduced to you in your Slack channel.
- Gerard, our head setter, posts updates in the channel on how many leads he's working, who he's following up and who he's qualified.

Géard 2:14 PM

Hi [redacted] and [redacted] - Worked through 9 leads and follow up calls. No bookings as of yet. 2 out of location so far.

Part 5: What a booking looks like

13. You get notified three ways

1. Slack: a message in your channel with the lead's name, project, timeframe and why, other quotes, location and the setter's notes.
2. SMS: a text straight to your mobile.
3. GoHighLevel: the contact record shows the call and every detail the setter captured.

Phone: [redacted]

When: Monday, October 5, 2026 8:00 AM

Project Details: [redacted] says nothing is urgent and there are no leaks, but the roof "just looks sad" and the colour is very faded, so she is looking at a refresh and paint, and although her husband thinks it needs some capping work and she feels it should be checked, she wants [redacted] advice on what is needed.

Timeframe and Why: Within a month if the price is right

Other Quotes: No

Location: Rowville 3178

Additional Setter Notes: [redacted] has a single-storey home with a standard-pitch tile roof of unknown type (she doesn't know if it is concrete or terracotta) and unknown age. She has no other quotes yet, so [redacted] is the first, and although she is not in a rush and has only just started thinking about it, she would aim to have the work done within a month if the quote is good. Call her on Monday 8 AM sharp shes an early bird.

15. Your job after the consult

Once you've been to the consult and quoted, drag the lead from Consult Booked to Quoted. When it's won or lost, move it again and add the lost reason.

Why this matters

It's how we track which bookings turn into quotes and jobs.

It's how we keep improving your ads and your lead quality.

Closing

Every lead is called, qualified and followed up by our team. Your job is simple: keep your calendar current, turn up to the consults we book, and move each lead forward in the CRM.
